SRI GURU GOBIND SINGH JI (1666-1708)

-S. Surjit Singh 'Gandhi'

We are taking pleasure while publishing these contents from the book
'History of the Sikh Gurus' by S. Surjit Singh Gandhi former Head of Sikh History Research Board (SGPC).

Reasons for leaving Anandpur for Paonta

Soon after this incident, Raja Medini Parkash of Nahan invited the Guru Ji to visit him. The Guru Ji accepted the offer and left for Nahan. Guru Ji himself says "After this I left Anandpur and reached the city of Paonta (a place in Nahan state) situated on the bank of Jamuna and saw and partook various activities.¹ The Guru Ji does not give any details regarding the reasons that led him to decide to leave Makhwal. It is, therefore, necessary to search for the causes. The Sikh Sakhi Kars are of the view that because he incurred displeasure of Bhim Chand on account of his refusal to loan the trained Prasadi elephant to Raja Bhim Chand, on the occasion of his son's betrothal to the daughter of Fateh Shah of Garhwal, he had to leave Anandpur. The view of the Sikh chroniclers does not sound convincing. First if we accept this view, we will have to believe that the Guru's stay at Paonta was nominal which is incorrect in view of the relics of Paonta and Nahan tradition. The betrothal of Ajmer Chand, the son of the Raja of Bilaspur seems to have taken place in 1682, after the visit of Duni Chand of Kabul and Rattan Rai, a Chieftain of Assam and the battle of Bhangani was fought in 1688 suggesting that the marriage was performed in 1687 i.e. to say five years after the betrothal-the fact which is not believable in the light of the Sikh chronicler's records suggesting it again and again that marriage was performed not long after betrothal ceremony. Hence the linking of 'Elephant episode' with the retirement of the Guru to Nahan is not historically correct.

Nevertheless, the relations of the Guru Ji with Bhim Chand were not happy the reason of which can be found in the inter-State politics of hill states. When Guru Tegh Bahadur Sahib was invited by Raja Dip Chand to settle at Makhwal, which was within his territory, he was motivated to detach the Sikh Guru and the Sikhs from their close friendship with the chief of Hadur. Dip Chand died in 1667 and Bhim Chand who was a minor succeeded to him. Some years even after the death of Guru Tegh Bahadur Sahib, the existence of Guru's headquarters, one at Makhwal and the other at Kiratpur, did not create any problem.

The rulers of Hadur and Kahlur remained indulgent towards the Sikhs, particularly after the martyrdom of Guru Tegh Bahadur Sahib at Delhi in 1675. Within a few years, however, two new factors came into operation, Kirpal, the maternal uncle of Guru Gobind Singh Ji adopted the martial interests of Guru Gobind and Makhawal began to give the appearance of an armed camp. The Guru's movements between Makhawal and Kiratpur, which hitherto had appeared to be an ordinary thing, were looked upon with suspicion by Bhim Chand who was now coming to manhood. Besides this mutual rivalry between the ruler of Hadur and Bhim Chand began to re-appear which for some time past were relegated to background under the strain of the danger of the Mughal Imperialism. Apprehensive of the close ties between the chief of Hadur and the armed Sikhs of the young Guru Gobind Singh Ji, Bhim Chand demanded an un-equivocal declaration from Guru Gobind Singh that be recognised the temporal lordship of the Chief of Kahlur and of him alone. Bhim Chand, in the pride of youth, threw all caution to the winds and treated the young Gobind and his maternal uncle Kirpal Chand in a cavalier fashion. He insisted on the Guru Ji recognizing his authority in a manner that was both shabby and insulting. He not only demanded tribute as an over-lord which none of the Sikh Gurus had paid till then but insisted on being presented with the things of his choice which the Guru rightly refused to give. Considering the refusal as a challenge to his authority, Bhim Chand now attacked the Guru Ji but was beaten back. The unexpected conflict as it was not followed by any understanding between the victorious and the defeated began a period of extreme tension for Kirpal. In this stage of suspended hostilities constant clashes between the Guru's men and Bhim Chand's soldiers were inevitable. Such state of affairs went a long way in taking the decision of shifting the head-quarter 10 Paonta. Another consideration also played its part so far as the decision of shifting the headquarter was concerned.

Guru Tegh Bahadur 's martyrdom took place in 1675 and it was too much to expect from the bigot Aurangzeb to leave Guru Gobind Singh Ji untouched especially when Ram Rai and his henchmen who had easy access to the court and the person of Aurangzeb were hostile towards him, In view of this, the Guru Ji decided to select some place other than Anandpur for his abode where he should find ample peace and opportunity to give a shape to his plans. He selected Paonta for this purpose which commanded advantages over Anandpur. In the first instance, Paonta was farther from Sirhind, the nearest Mughal centre of power as compared with Anandpur. Secondly, it provided a natural fortress and because of its difficult environs, it was well-nigh inaccessible. No wonder, the Guru Ji built a fortress thereat. The fortress was built by the followers of the Guru in twelve days in 1685. A township grew round it. He lived at Paonta for three years, during this period his activities touched all aspects of life. He continued the task of the work of self-improvement through means more than one.
